

presents

One Minute IN A WOMAN'S HEAD

3:32PM

I love Nordstrom rack, it's like discount city. Although it's like waving a red flag saying, "hi I have champagne taste on a natty lite budget."

There are enough people here who clearly feel the same way so all the poor people unite in an effort to save a dollar! Who hoo! Maybe I should get Matt something, nah, if we're saving I should be shopping for one, which would be me.

Men can totally get away with wearing the same things constantly. It's like guy code; they pay zero attention to the fact that their friend wore the same shirt three times in the same week. I doubt they even wash it. Gross. I can get away with saving an outfit if no one of importance saw me. I mean as long as I am seeing different people it's totally doable.

Why is the juniors section always cheaper? Probably because juniors are half the size of a normal adult woman... less fabric I assume? Clever! Can I fit into juniors? Hmm... No, don't do it... when you try it on you'll just get mad because it doesn't fit. I hate trying on clothes, it's honestly exhausting and depressing. Men never try on anything, they just stare at it, assume it fits and go on their merry way. Why is that!!!??? I stare at it debate over it, buy it, try it on at home, then eat my feelings because it doesn't fit.

Is my phone ringing? I swear I hear that darn ringtone constantly but no one is calling me. I think these prices have gone up; I have yet to find a bargain.

This place is overrated.

3:33PM